

MULTIMEDIA NEWSROOM & CLASSROOM DEDICATED

Baruch College has unveiled "Studio H," a state-of-the-art journalism laboratory designed to bring cutting-edge technological capabilities into the classroom and train the next generation of students in the most advanced techniques of news gathering and dissemination. The facility was made possible by a $1 million gift from The Harnisch Family Philanthropies. Ruth Ann and William ('68) Harnisch have called Studio H a "bold investment" intended to "produce returns that we can't yet imagine."

Studio H includes 24 work stations fully equipped with computers and sophisticated editing software as well as video and digital cameras and sound-recording equipment. The facility also has high-quality multimedia presentation capabilities.

Stan Altman, President of Baruch College, said: "This professional-quality facility offers Baruch College a world-class resource for preparing tomorrow's practitioners and leaders in the fields of journalism, new media, and all of the writing professions. It immediately helps to position our new journalism department in the forefront of professional writing programs in the City and the region."
